An Easter invitation

Today as part of our worship time, we will all together sing the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah. Two singers from all four voice parts will be on the stage facing the audience as a means of support. Dot Smith will accompany on the piano, I will lead. You can find copies of the piece on the table at the back of the sanctuary. To those who are very familiar with this piece, do not feel neglected if you have not been asked to join the group up front. Your voices are very important in supporting those around you in the congregation who are not as familiar with the piece, so sing out, don't hold back, and if you are able, place yourselves strategically within the larger group to best be heard. There will be various levels of familiarity with the piece represented among us, but it is likely that most, if not all, of us will be able to join in at various times. Please feel free to sing all of it, or just the parts of it you are more familiar with, or just simply listen. And please don't be afraid of making mistakes as we together make our way through this glorious piece of music written by George Frederic Handel in the year 1741. Hallelujah! The kingdom of this world has become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ. -Dale Stoltzfus
